Tickets for 'On the Air' now on sale

This production has been a new experience for us. In our regular workshops we have found interest and enjoyment in improvising and devising both actions and dialogue. So we took a Sherlock Holmes radio script as a core, and built this show around it. Starting in October we created the actors and production team who make the radio show. We devised their characters, back stories and chequered history with each other. We then put these characters in a live anniversary radio broadcast, lit the blue touch paper and, well you will see the result. It's a challenging but fun time. We hope you enjoy it. Whatever happens, the show must go on.

A special live anniversary performance of a Sherlock Holmes story is performed in a radio theatre in front of a live audience. However in this stressful environment, the tensions and conflicts between the members of the radio cast and production team which have built up during the long running series come to a head. The off-mic drama threatens to interfere with the live broadcast, but whatever happens, once on the air, the show must go on...
