Playing with Sugar

Our current project is Playing with Sugar involving local people in devising and performing a new show to mark the celebrations for the opening of the newly renovated Streatham Tate Library in March 2014. It will be inspired by the collected reminiscences of local residents from Streatham and a volunteer research team are interviewing residents and collating submissions. The STC artistic team will then work with local people to devise, write and perform the show based on the reminiscences. You can see the interviews so far, and follow the progress on our blog at blog.streathamtheatre.org.uk.

If you would like to get involved, please contact us via sugar@streathamtheatre.org.uk
