with Sugar for the library reopening 28 & 29 March

Our current project Playing with Sugar has local people performing a new devised show to mark the re-opening of the newly renovated Streatham Tate Library, inspired by the collected reminiscences of local residents from Streatham. Free tickets are currently available through our agent TicketSource.

You can see the interviews so far, and follow the progress on our blog at blog.streathamtheatre.org.uk. You can also add your own memories.

Rehearsals have started but there's still time to get involved in creating and performing the show. Email us at sugar@streathamtheatre.org.uk.

Future Shows:

We're currently planning our shows for the Streatham Festival (theme 'Street of my imagination'), for Christmas/New Year (a panto?), and for in-between. So if there's a show you'd like to see, or one you'd like to direct or otherwise take part in please let us know. We're open to all suggestions but obviously it has to be practical for us to stage!
